Resource Spotlight: PsycINFO

by Gayle Graham on August 25th, 2017 in Resource Spotlight, Social Work, Psychology, Addictions, Mental Health

| Comments

When you are conducting research on topics in the behavioural and social sciences, consider starting at the library's access to PsycINFO.

PsycINFO provides more than four million records from journals, dissertations, and books from 1597-present, covering subjects in such disciplines as neuroscience, psychiatry, psychology, social work, business, and law. Health care professionals working in mental health, addictions, and psychiatry may find more success with PsycINFO as a search starting point because the tags used to describe articles are developed with these professions in mind.

Searching Help

Get started searching PsychINFO by checking out this quick, introductory video:

Sample PsycINFO Search on EBSCOhost

https://library.nshealth.ca/Home/News/resource-spotlight-psycinfo
For more tips on searching PsycINFO, check out this quick reference guide and the PsycINFO YouTube channel.

Full-text Article Tips

1. Under Limit To, check the “Linked Full Text” box to see results for items to which you have full-text access
2. In your list of search results, look for links that say “Full Text from PubMed Central” or “Linked Full Text” at the bottom of each article citation. Click one of these links to access the full-text article
3. Select the hyperlinked article title to see more information about the article (Detailed Record)
4. When viewing the Detailed Record, look for the link to full-text in the column on the left-hand side
If you are interested in learning more about PsycINFO, the library is here to help. Complete this form to request a custom education session.

Gayle Graham
Librarian Educator, Access Services
Halifax Infirmary, Central Zone